

Interpreting Doesn't Have to be Unreliable!!

We have been asked for details of how to ensure interpreting is confidential and professional. This is to reassure families and people who use services that they will receive fair and correct information.

Professional interpreters will usually hold a diploma. If they are on the national register they will have signed a code of ethics and will abide by it. They will have photo ID and CRB clearance. For information check out the website www.nrpsi.org.uk and www.iol.org.uk

With thanks to Jan Cambridge