

Journey Planner

Getting yourself around London can be difficult, but its especially difficult if you don't whether your route is going to be accessible, and you're going to a strange part of town.

The Transport for London website has a Journey Planner, which can take much of the uncertainty out of travel. It's quite an amazing piece of computer technology, as it combines timetables and access details of all the routes and all modes of transport in London. It links these up to an A-Z, so you can also see the maps of the areas you're going to and from. (Transport for All, Summer 2004)

GLAD – Disability Update / Issue 18/2004 – 9th September 2004